In the early 1960's - Joanne, Kathy and Mary are vivacious cheerleaders. Five years later, in their college sorority house, they confront their futures with nervous jauntiness. When they reunite briefly in New York in 1974, their lives have diverged and old-time banter rings false. This snapshot-sharp chronicle of the lives of three small town Texas girls is both a bittersweet comedy and a remarkable testament to the way many of us grew up. Heifner's play captures the spirit of a bygone era as well as the eternal complexities of friendship
