SYNOPSIS

"Once upon a time in the nuclear fifties, it's just another day at ENRICO FERMI HIGH, which is named after the man who invented the atomic bomb. Jonny Warner - an orphan from the wrong side of the tracks - has transferred to the school. Miss Strict, the comic and demanding - indeed tyrannical - high school principal, senses trouble in this new James Dean-styled student, who has taken the "H" out of his name as a sign of his rebellious nature. When Miss Strict throws the Civil Defense siren, the students fall under their desks for the drill test. Jonny meets Toffee, a typically sweet high school girl, and it's love at first sight. In true fifties style, the pair decide to go steady (AIN'T NO GOIN' BACK). Miss Strict, who does not approve of this hallway romance, along with Toffee's parents, persuade Toffee that Jonny is no good for her and that she must end the relationship."
