

Production Description

Casting an upstate New York independent short film. The film touches on real issues we as a society and a species face. With the advances in technology and awareness that our privacy is being monitored and recorded, now more than ever the need for a real and authentic connection is of paramount significance and importance. This story subtly expresses that in a fun and entertaining way.

Logline: A computer programmer starts to suspect he's being spied upon through his various digital devices. Becoming increasingly disconnected from reality he barricades himself in his apartment, believing that someone or something is out to get him...

Tonally and visually the source of inspiration is from The Twilight Zone mixed with the film noir genre. I believe these two examples lend themselves to the story and will furthermore enhance the experience. Shooting on black & white film.
